THE South-Carolina Gazette.

From FRIDAY April 7th, to MONDAY April 10th, 1749.

His MAJESTY'S most Gracious SPEECH to both Houses of Parliament, on Tuesday, November 29, 1748.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Acquainted you, at the close of the last session of parliament, that preliminary articles for a general pacification had been signed by my minister, and those of the most Christian King, and the States General of the United Provinces; to which the Empress Queen of Hungary, the Kings of Spain and Sardinia, and the other powers engaged in the war, soon afterwards acceded.

I lost no time in taking the proper measures, with my allies, for effectuating a general peace by a definitive treaty, in which all parties were to concur; and, notwithstanding the difficulties which must attend so extensive a work, wherein the respective interests of so many powers were to be finally adjusted by common consent, I have been able, by the blessing of God, in the course of the summer, to compleat it; and I have the pleasure to acquaint you, that a definitive treaty, previously concerted with my allies, has been signed by my ministers, and those of France and the States General; to which all the other powers concerned in the war have acceded without reserve.

It has been my chief endeavour, in putting an end to the calamities of war, to make the most effectual provision for securing the rights and interests of my own subjects, and to procure the best terms and conditions for my allies, that the situation of affairs would admit. And I take much satisfaction in being able to tell you, that I have found a general good disposition in all the parties engaged in the war, to bring this negociation to a happy conclusion. From these circumstances we may promise ourselves, under God, a long enjoyment of the blessings of peace, provided we make the right use and improvement of it.

Gentlemen of the house of Commons,

As great a progress has been made towards reducing the public expences, as the nature of the case would allow; and I only desire you to grant me such supplies, as may be requisite for the current service of the year, for your own security, and for making good such engagements as have been already entered into, and laid before you. Times of tranquillity are the proper seasons for lessening the national debt, and strengthening ourselves against future events; & as the necessary means for these purposes, I must recommend to you the improvement of the public revenue, and the maintaining our naval force in proper strength and vigour.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is impossible for me to speak to you on this subject of the happy re-establishment of the public tranquillity, without returning you my sincere thanks, for the great and affectionate support you have given me, in carrying on this just and necessary war; in which, not only the common cause of Europe, but our own independency and essential interest were highly concerned. As the extraordinary burdens which it brought upon my good subjects give me much uneasiness, so I could not but wish to see as speedy an end put to them as possible. Whatever the events of war may have been, the bravery of my troops has distinguished itself on every occasion, to their lasting honour; and our signal successes at sea must ever be remembered to the glory of the British fleet, and entitle it to the particular attention and support of this nation. You will farther consider, that those brave men, who have served well by sea or land, and cannot now be employ'd, justly deserve to be the objects of your favour & protection.

As my first care has been to take the most early measures, that my people may, as soon as possible, reap the benefits of peace, so I doubt not of your chearful assistance in perfecting this good work. Let me earnestly recommend to you the advancement of our commerce, and cultivating the arts of peace, in which you may depend on my hearty concurrence and encouragement. It shall be my endeavour to continue these blessings, by a punctual execution of the engagements now taken, and by maintaining the most perfect harmony and good correspondence with the friends and allies of Great-Britain.

The experience I have had of you makes me rely on the zeal, unanimity, and dispatch of your proceedings; and you may be assured, that nothing shall be wanting, on my part, to make you a flourishing and happy people.

The Humble ADDRESS of the Right Honorable the Lords spiritual and temporal, in Parliament assembled, Nov. 30.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lords spiritual and temporal, in parliament assembled, return your Majesty our humble thanks for your most gracious speech from the throne.

The joy which all your faithful subjects feel on your Majesty's safe and happy return into this kingdom, is incapable of any addition; but it gives us at this time a peculiar satisfaction, as it is accompanied with a general Peace, effectuated by your Majesty's prudence and firmness, and with the concurrence of all your allies. On the successful conclusion of this great work, we heartily congratulate your Majesty; and, with the utmost thankfulness, acknowledge your wisdom and indefatigable labours in carrying on the late just and necessary war, entered into for supporting the liberties of Europe, and securing the independency and most essential interests of this Kingdom. We are equally sensible of the tender regard your Majesty has shewn for your people, in the re-establishment of the public tranquillity.

We cannot be ignorant of the many difficulties which must have attended this important and extensive negociation; and we look upon it as a great instance of your Majesty's vigilant and active care for the publick welfare, that it has been brought to perfection, in concert with, and with the concurrence of so many powers, in so short a time.

With hearts full of duty and affection, we offer our thanks to your Majesty for your paternal goodness, in considering with so much tenderness the burdens of your subjects, and in taking the very first opportunity to give them ease, and to enable them to reap the benefit of the pacification. Excited by your gracious example, and our love to our country, we assure your Majesty of our chearful & hearty concurrence in all such measures, as may tend to perfect what your Majesty has so prudently begun; may improve our trade and commerce; promote quiet and harmony at home, and render the blessings of peace, under the divine protection, general and lasting to your people. In doing this, we will never fail to have the utmost attention to the honour of your Majesty's crown, the stability of your throne, and the safety of your kingdoms.

We have a just sense of the distinguished behaviour of your Majesty's forces by sea and land, during the war. We look upon them as an honour and strength to their country: and we applaud that goodness which your Majesty has expressed, in recommending such of them as cannot now be employ'd, to the favour and protection of parliament. Your Majesty's sentiments concerning the naval force of this kingdom are highly worthy of a King of Great-Britain, who has the honour and interest of this nation entirely at heart; and the signal success that has attended it in the war, as well as the consequences to be derived from it for maintaining the peace, cannot fail to shew the neceſſity of giving the utmoſt attention to the ſupport and encouragement of the fleet.

Permit us, Sir, to make uſe of this happy occaſion of approaching your royal throne, to give your Majeſty the ſtrongeſt aſſurances of our inviolable duty and fidelity to your ſacred perſon, and our zeal for the preſervation of the proteſtant ſucceſſion in your illuſtrious houſe, the great bulwark of our religion and liberties. To theſe principles we will always ſtedfaſtly adhere; and we faithfully promiſe your Majeſty, to exert our utmoſt endeavours to ſupport you in maintaining that repoſe, which your Majeſty has reſtored to your kingdoms, as well as to preſerve and cultivate the moſt perfect correſpondence and union with the friends and allies of Great-Britain, and to promote the glory and happineſs of your reign.

His Majeſty's moſt gracious ANSWER.

MY LORDS,

I Thank you for this dutiful and affectionate Addreſs. The ſatisfaction you have ſo unanimouſly expreſſed in the meaſures I have taken, is particularly agreeable to me; and you may be aſſured, that both in war and in peace, my great aim has been, and always ſhall be, the advancement of the true intereſts of my people, and the ſupport of my allies.
